

A Message from the Executive Director

Living the missionary life requires unbounded dedication, commitment and selflessness. One can truly witness the love of Christ manifested through their labor. And at Joshua Path, we are privileged to partner with these special people in order to help spread their passion and the results of their work through video production.

Years ago, before I could even conceive of Joshua Path and its place in the mission field, one of my beloved college professors planted the seed of mission work in my heart – despite the fact I had not even considered it. And upon my return from a trip to Asia, I had the opportunity to share my journey with evangelist Billy Graham. I believe God allowed me to cross paths with this great Christian leader to receive the words he inscribed in my Bible:

For I am confident of this very thing, that he who began a good work in you will perfect it until the day of Christ Jesus. Philippians 1:6 NASB.

My brief encounter with Dr. Graham and his wife, Ruth, truly inspired me to continue seeking Christ and pressing forward with missions. Within a few years of this meeting, I was talking with missionaries on furlough from their African ministry. Unlike a time for rest that the word “furlough” connotes, missionaries probably do more work when they come home than when they are in the field, as this is when they must raise support to keep their work going. As a film student, I prayed, “Lord, there has to be a better way for missionaries to communicate their work to their supporters.” This is when I knew that media could somehow make a difference...but technology hadn't yet caught up with the vision I was forming.

Through the years I have never lost my zeal for helping missionaries. And now, almost a decade later, advanced technology has made it possible for my vision to become a reality – and Joshua Path was born. With a simple digital video camera and a laptop computer, I am able to travel to any corner of the globe, shoot a video, edit it, burn it onto a DVD, and hand it to the missionary before I leave. Our productions truly capture where the missionaries live, what they do and the lives they touch, creating an effective tool for support.

Thanks to Jesus, our godly board members and many faithful supporters, Joshua Path is celebrating our 5th anniversary. And on a very small budget, we have so far been able to help raise over $10 million for missionaries and ministries...now imagine the potential if we had funding!

Missionaries need this hand up. And we want to offer them our services at no charge. So we need you to join with us, prayerfully and financially, so we can minister to those in the field being the hands and feet of Christ.

May God Bless You,
Pete Kenny, Founder & Executive Director
